Physicists Philosophers Scientists
in the World

Dear Physicists, Philosophers, Scientists, dear Friends:

„The choice is between forcing the description of the world so that it adapts to our intuition [about the time  $t$ ], or learning instead to adapt our intuition to what we have d i s - c o v e r e d about the world [ $t'$ ]. I have few doubts that the second strategy is the most fruitful one.“ (Physical Idiot and „Poet“, Irish Times, 2018)

In German:

„Wir stehen vor der Alternative, entweder die Beschreibung der Welt zwanghaft an unsere Anschauungen [über die Zeit  $t$ ] anzupassen oder zu lernen, unsere Anschauungen an das anzugleichen, was wir über die Welt h e r a u s g e f u n d e n haben [ $t'$ ]. Ich habe kaum Zweifel daran, dass die zweite Strategie die fruchtbarere ist.“

If you don't see the idiocy of this ‚great‘ sentence, you're in the wrong job – Sorry! [For a little help see footnote on page 257/258.]

Every good wish.

Sincerely,
G. E. Streibig alias Chyron

P.S.:

What do you think about the following sentence?

„When a clock A has gone twice as fast in the same time as an identical clock B, then in A twice as much time has passed as in B.“ (The Greatest Genius of All Times)
